

ABSTRACT

An electric iron for straightening hair that is capable of producing anion has an electron generator embedded on one of the handles of the ceramic plates heating the electric iron. Electrons generated from the inside of the ion generator meets air at the end of the cathode line, which is equipped with plurality of thin carbon fiber filaments, and generates oxygen anion. Oxygen anion produced comes into contact with the hair and makes it smooth and silky.

10

15

20

25